statement of intent

In fact, I wrote Le debut de l'A, in Paris during the month of august 2000. I rarely write in Paris. But that time, I wrote in Paris. In the heat of Paris during the month of august. In solitude. And missing the woman I loved. Truly. We had just finished creating a beautiful project together : the epic of Gilgamesh for the Festival d'Avignon. She was a part of the American distribution and when the festival finished, she went back to New York. My body and my spirit, like after every show, were devastated. I was devastated and like after each show, I was more poor than before. It is in this poverty that I wrote. And I hid nothing. Everything is true. Everything that I relate is true. Except the accident at the end, which sees us die. But everything is true. I didn't even think to give names to the characters: they are named after us. I hid nothing. I did nothing but listen to what my lack had to say. I retranscribed. I observed myself. I silently spoke each day with the loved one. I closed the shades in the middle of the day and I clenched my teeth.

What I recount is this unique moment at the beginning sentiments of love that we never want to see end. When finally it all begins.

Pascal Rambert, novembre 2004
